SIR E. GORST'S SPEECH.Sir Eldon Gorst's speech at Khartoum must be regarded with satisfaction by all who have the interests of the Sudan at heart, inasmuch as we are informed that he stated that Lord Cromer's policy was to be upheld, and the lines of his Administration followed as long as he (Sir Eldon Gorst) was at the Agency. The development of the Sudan has been a remarkably rapid one, and all the existing conditions point to a continuance of the expansion of its prosperity, and it is therefore of the utmost importance that no obstacle should be placed in the way of its administrators at the present time. The note of the Financial Adviser set at rest the doubts as to the financial treatment which the Sudan was to receive under the new regime, but as the whole question of the Sudan and its administration is one of such intense importance to this country, it is just as well that a definite line of policy should have been stated and it is relieving to find that no departure from the conditions laid down by the late Consul General are to be made. When the size of the country is considered, no less than the numberless tribes who come under the jurisdiction of the Sudan Government, the comparative smallness of the English and Egyptian staff which is employed in its administration is certainly remarkable.
A few years since the country was seething in the throes of a savage and despotic Government under which the laws of might were alone respected, while to-day the lawless adherents of that Government are the loyal and efficient soldiers of this, and even the tribes which inhabit the provinces to the extreme south of the country are slowly, but none the less surely, being trained to the knowledge of the advantages of labour and its attendant results. Countries, like persons, are prone to forget the source from which their benefits have sprung so long as these be-nefits continue to exist without interruption, and so it is that we hear frequent complaints as the sums of money which are occasionally voted (on loan at interest let it be remembered) to the Sudan by the Egyptian Government, the authors of this discontent being apparently forgetful of the enormous extent to which Egypt has profited by the works which have been and are being accomplished in the former country.Take away the advantages thus gained and we fancy that the critics of the moment would be the first to condemn what they would be only too ready to term short-sighted policy of a Government which had thus rendered useless the expenditure of thousands and the labour of years. It is incredible that anyone who has the interest of this country before him, should be so far ignorant of the relation in which it stands to the Sudan, as to advocate the diminution of the grants which are necessary to the welfare of the Southern Dominion by even so much as a small piastre, and yet there are those who are apparently always ready to lift their voices in an incessant chorus of complaint, and prophecy ruin to Egypt if the granting of such loans is continued.Such an attitude would be the more readily understood if there existed any single instance where money advanced to the Sudan had been devoted to any purpose other than to the most pressing reforms, but from the very first expenditure in the country we believe that every piastre has been placed to the greatest possible advantage, and that no single reform has been undertaken but it was essential to the continued welfare of the country. The Sudanese are naturally a smart race and one which only requires a modicum of instruction, and this will perhaps account for the extraordinary success which has attended the efforts of the Government to implant civilization in their country; even now when the people might with justice be supposed to retain many of their former prejudices as to their mode of life, it is astonishing to find how very few cling to them, the spirit of emulation is exceedingly keen, not only among the younger men, but it also touches the remnants of the former generation with the result that the Sudanese bid fair to attain to an intellectual level equal to that of any African race in a remarkably short space of time.The Government is working steadily to the advancement of its sphere of influence, the natives are being trained, to all the trades for which there is any necessity in the country, and the agricultural instinct, nullified to a great extent by the policy of the late Khalifa who considered it necessary to employ all the able bodied men in his own body guard, is being fostered and encouraged in every manner possible, while the formation and treatment of the army has met with results which perhaps were only to be expected, the Sudanese being naturally a lover of the display and glory which is an attribute to a soldier's life.Take all these points in review, and it will be seen that nothing but what is beneficial having resulted from the policy adopted by Lord Cromer, it would be little less than criminal to introduce any changes of importance at the present day, and we congratulate Sir Eldon Gorst upon the decision of upholding the old methods of administration.One of our contemporaries certainly is distinctly unhappy on the subject however, and sets up a doleful wail because the new Consul General has seen fit to continue the policy of the old, but as the mission of this paper appears to be that of inviting causes of complaint it is doubtful whether it ever attempts to reach the truth of things at all, or it would cheerfully abandon the Sudan to the reign of such men as the Mahdi or the Khalifa provided only that no Englishman were allowed to remain in the country.However in a commendable desire to obtain the truth on at least one point it inserts a postscript asking for information regarding "the proposed campaign to Darfur" and in reference to this we are in a position to inform it that there is to be no campaign to Darfur, neither has there been one proposed."AU DE ROUGE"

An Important Find.

An important discovery has been made in Egypt of an ancient papyrus which will enable great and important additions to be made to existing Biblical lore. It is stated that amongst the most important things revealed by the papyrus is a post-Resurrection saying of Christ, prophesying the end of sin, and a passage proving the accuracy of the liturgical ending of the Lord's Prayer. The translation of the writings will take a considerable time, and it is thought that probably three years will elapse before they are ready for publication.

THE BANK OF EGYPT.

On enquiry at the Bank of Egypt this morning as to the exactitude of the following paragraph from "Les Nouvelles," we were informed that there was no truth in it:—

Notre correspondant du Caire nous apprend, sous toutes réserves que M. Luzzatto, le Directeur de la Bank of Egypt, donnera sa démission au mois de Mai.

This rumour as to Luzzatto's Pasha's departure appears to have arisen because in next May he will complete his fifty years of service in the Bank of Egypt.

EXPRESS NILE STEAMER CO.

The Bonded Warehouse at Alexandria is to take over the management of the Express Nile Steamers Company immediately. This change was originally arranged to take place on the 15th inst. but the former manager of the company having been called upon to retire owing to his having exceeded his orders, the company has decided to delay the transference of its management no longer. The recall of the "America" after she had started up river gave rise to a rumour that the company was about to wind up. There is, however, not the slightest foundation for this rumour, the truth being that the "America" should never have left dock at all and it is in consequence of this mistake that the change in management is taking place earlier than had been previously arranged.

ALEXANDRIA'S MURDERS.

Some weeks ago an English sailor was murdered near Saint Catherine's Square at Alexandria. Sonouryan, who is accused of the crime, will be tried at the May sessions of the Hellenic Assize Court. The trial was to have taken place this week, but as some essential witnesses did not appear, it had to be postponed.

The enquiry held by the Italian Consular Court into the subject of the recent murder of the advocate Volpini shows that the murderer, Massimiliano, acted with premeditation. The man, who accompanied the assassin to the lawyer's chambers, is considered by the Consulate to have been an accomplice in the crime. The murderer and his accomplice, who are still at Hadra Prison, will shortly be sent to Ancona for trial. The "dozier" of the case has already been despatched to Italy.

The Native Parquet has opened an enquiry into the murder of a Berberine in Old Bourse street on Sunday evening, whose head was almost severed from his body by a young Greek.

The Native Assize Court at Alexandria has sentenced Mohamed Mousbaha, Abou Shehid to penal servitude for life for having murdered his divorced wife while she was being married to another man.

A correspondent writes:—Now that so many of the chiefs of the Alexandria Police have been transferred, it is to be hoped that active measures will be taken to prove the extraordinary mystery surrounding the assassination of Mr. Vivante in the summer. Here the victim was a well-known resident of Cairo and he was killed in his bedroom in a hotel in the centre of Alexandria. It is very strange that the local detectives are absolutely nonplussed in this matter.

ACCESSION DAY.

TO-DAY'S CELEBRATIONS.

To-day, on the occasion of the anniversary of the accession of H.H. the Khedive, Cairo bears a festive appearance. Everywhere are signs of rejoicing and loyalty to the throne. The principal streets of the Capital are gaily decorated with bunting, and the hotels, such as Shepherd's and the Grand Continental, have no small share in the scheme of decoration.

The reception held by H.H. the Khedive at Abdin Palace this morning was more than usually well attended, and the stream of carriages conveying the Khedive's distinguished visitors was a source of great interest to the tourists who happened to be on the route to the Palace, at the entrance to which a guard of honour was drawn up to pay the usual compliments to the members of the Diplomatic Corps.

At noon a salute of 21 guns was fired from the Citadel and the Polygon barracks, similar salutes being fired at Alexandria and Port Said.

This morning at 10.30 a.m. his Highness reviewed the Egyptian troops in Cairo on the Observatory parade ground at Abbassieh, and in the evening a fête will be held at the Bab el Gardens in honour of the anniversary.

At Alexandria the anniversary is marked by an abundant display of flags of all nations, the Government departments making a special show.

H. E. the Governor of Alexandria held an official reception at the Governorat from 10 a.m. to noon, which was attended by the Government civil and military officials, the Consul Corps and a large number of aulems, notables, and clergy of the city. The pupils of the Orwa El-Weska schools, with their bands, numbering fifteen hundred, preceded the Governor, and then returned to Mohamed Aly square, where they played the Khedivial Anthem in front of the statue of Mohamed Aly.

In the evening a banquet will be given by the Governor at the New Khedivial Hotel to the Government administrative officials and a number of notables of Alexandria.

The banquet will be attended by the following:—Mustapha Pasha Ibad, Beneducci Bey, Mr. Boroghrevian, M. E. Eeman, Moh. Bey Saleh, Moh. Bey Mahfuz, Mr. Kiug Lewis, Rear Admiral Sir Massie Blomfield, Dixon Bey, Gedge Pasha, Borton Bey, Dr. Schiess Pasha, Chataway Bey, Hopkinson Bey, Hafez Bey Mohamed, Dr. C. M. Elkins, Sheehan Bey, Mr. Ehrlich, Mr. Moleworth, Ismail Bey Hassanein, Ahmed Pasha Yehia, Ahmed Pasha Ferid, Sir Joseph Saba Pasha, Soliman Bey el Abani, Ahmed Bey Ayoub, Mansour Bey Youssef, Ismail Bey el Bourai, Ibrahim Bey Hakki, Ali Bey Hussein, Zanniri Bey and Ahmed Bey Sid Ahmed.

We beg to tender our hearty congratulations to the Khedive of Egypt on the anniversary of his accession. On an occasion like the present it is both customary and opportune to pass in review the chief events of the sovereign's reign. But such a survey would be inadequate without endeavouring to estimate the bearing of such events upon the present situation and their probable influence on the future. The most important of these events from this point of view, as standing out prominently from among the rest, and as calculated to make his Highness's reign famous even in the lengthy roll of Egypt's history, are the extension of her dominions by the restoration of her lost provinces in the Sudan and the building of the Assouan Dam. The former has assured to this country durable peace upon her borders and has manifested to the world at large the bravery and capacity of her soldiers when pitted against a most valiant foe. But that brilliant feat of arms has been rivalled, if not surpassed, by the greatest of engineering triumphs which the modern world has witnessed, and which must necessarily be chief amongst the factors contributing to her future prosperity. These events, even if unaccompanied by many useful ameliorations in almost every department of the Administration, would be sufficient to lend lustre and distinction to his Highness's reign. At a moment like the present, one naturally asks oneself what are the main features of the era inaugurated by the accession of the Khedive, and the conclusion suggested is that coming ages will note this epoch as a period of peaceful progress and prolonged prosperity.

Called suddenly to the Throne at the age of eighteen, the Khedive was brought face to face with a most difficult situation.

He was on all sides surrounded by pitfalls. On the one hand there was a foreign occupation of his country and on the other native advisers of unscrupulous character and, fresh from the environment of Vienna, he was quite inexperienced of the intrigues and cabals, which ever beset an Oriental Court. But in addition to these perilous factors, the situation was complicated by the jealousy of Turkey, who eagerly desired that Egypt should fall again into her hands, and the rivalry and mutual hostility of the European Powers. Any serious and sustained effort to set himself at variance with the occupying Power would have been fraught with the most disastrous consequences, not alone to the Khedivial dynasty, but might have led to the shedding of Egyptian blood as a prelude to a European conflict. The danger of such an attitude is plainly hinted at by Lord Milner in his "England in Egypt," who does not exaggerate its dire possibilities. But despite his youth and consequent inexperience and the absence of capable advisers, his Highness has risen superior to all the intrigues to which many a ruler of maturer years, though less richly endowed with the qualities of firmness, courage, and discrimination, might very well have succumbed. It is manifest to those who have closely watched his Highness's career that the dangers by which he was formerly surrounded are now entirely removed, and recent years have shown that the future which awaits him has all the elements of permanent well-being and advancement.

The remarkable, nay exceptional, ability, with which His Highness grappled with the complex problem of dual government and proved himself equal to an abnormal situation, not of his own creation, merits high commendation. The part he has had to play has been one of the most delicate and embarrassing that could fall to the lot of any Sovereign and would have taxed the patience and sagacity of statesmen of no mean order. That task has been to maintain his prestige and rightful position amongst his native subjects, whilst acting in deference to the advice tendered to him by the British Government. In there anyone, who will venture to suggest that his endeavours in this direction have not been crowned with complete and conspicuous success!

His Highness's solicitude for the welfare of his country, is evinced by his constant and never-failing attendance at the Council of Ministers and the active share taken by him in their deliberations. He is, in fact, his own Minister, though holding himself rightly above faction and party. Not alone is he his own Minister, but he is his own Ambassador, as witness his visits to European Courts and to Turkey. By the sovereigns of Europe he is always received as a persona grata especially in England, where his relations with the Royal Family are of the most cordial. His liberal hospitality to foreign royal visitors, when they are his guests, and his frequent and friendly receptions, accorded to representatives of Foreign Powers accredited to this country, are eloquent testimony to his European sympathies.

It would be difficult to name an Oriental ruler, who takes a more absorbing interest in the development of his country, than does the present holder of the Khedivate. The Mariout Railway would alone suffice to show the practical energy of his Highness. The line when extended to the Tripolitan frontier will one day become a solid, substantial, and effective link with the rest of the North African railway system, and is destined to become a great artery of traffic and to open up a huge extent of country, which has been allowed to fall into complete neglect since the Arab conquest of Egypt. His keen interest in agricultural pursuits, is evinced by the improved methods of husbandry on his estates and the great care he bestows on the breeding of the finest cattle. This encouragement of agriculture is one of his chief claims to popular devotion. Egypt is essentially an agricultural country and agriculture is the greatest of all industries, because the fertility of the soil is an inexhaustible source of wealth. It is to the credit of His Highness that he has understood and given himself up to the study of agricultural questions in a way unrivalled by any other sovereign, except perhaps the founder of united Italy, the late Victor Emanuel, whose boast it was to describe himself as King and cultivator. There is an advantage to a country, which has agriculture for its principle industry of a description seldom alluded to. That is, as was pointed out by Aristotle, that it keeps the population away from politics, an inestimable blessing assuredly in a state like Egypt where cultivation is still in so backward a condition. This consideration as well as the healthier life enjoyed away from the towns, to which in the building of modal villages the Khedive has so largely contributed, is probably present to his mind when by precept and example he ever inculcates the exploitation by the people themselves of Egypt's most valuable asset.

If we have accurately gauged the situation and rightly cast the horoscope of coming events, there lies before His Highness Abbas II, a future of such promise as may well be envied by many an ambitious potentate on the European continent, a future, indeed, which should amply satisfy the aspirations of one so practical in his aims and so reasonable in his desires.

It is the earnest hope of all true lovers of this country that he may long be spared to devote his energies to the furtherance of Egypt's advancement, to watch over her destinies and to assist her to attain to the position of foremost amongst Oriental nations.

ALEXANDRIA'S STREETS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "EGYPTIAN GAZETTE."

Sir—I spent a most pleasurable hour or two recently in the Nourba gardens, which are most enjoyable and long required, in fine a great boon to all residents. Would that the Municipality could see their way to spend a small sum, which would be vastly less than that spent on the Nourba gardens, in placing one of two of our small streets lying between Rue Cleopatra and the sea in a more sanitary condition by asphalt or paving. At present they are mere bye-lanes filled with filth and rubbish and can certainly not be considered sanitary. The area is only a small one, but it is very important to the inhabitants of the neighbourhood, and there are other areas requiring similar sanitation. This is a disgrace to the Municipality and should be immediately attended to, especially in view of the fact that we stand a risk of being visited by the cholera fiend, despite the laudable efforts which are being made to keep the disease out of the country by the Quarantine authorities.

Yours truly

THE HARDEN ACCUSATIONS.

A Cairo correspondent writes:—The judgment delivered against Herr Harden has been received with special pleasure in Cairo owing to the fact that the German journalist in his revelations introduced the name of Mr. Raymond Lecomte, who was one of the most popular members of the Diplomatic Corps in the Egyptian Capital when he was at the French Diplomatic Agency there a few years ago. Both in Cairo and in Paris it was fully recognised from the outset that Mr. Lecomte's name was most unwarrantably dragged into this unpleasant affair by Herr Harden.

CAIRO CONCERT SOCIETY.

The programme of the fourth concert was hardly equal to that of its predecessor, in depth, and one might say, emotion, yet it was most interesting. Berlioz overture to the "Carnaval Romain," a curious and delightfully descriptive piece, the "Pastoral" of course, and the prelude to the 3rd act of "Tristan"—these three pieces are well worth hearing. The pleasing "Sylvia" ballet, and Chabrier's clever "toute de force," "España," formed an admirably set-off as well given, and its variety of melodies and effects adequately realised. The "Pastoral" was hardly a success. The calm and distinctness it should have, were lost, the "Andante" was taken far too quickly and noisily. All the impression of rustic peace and beauty was blurred. The last two movements were not well accentuated, their distinctive points and transitions were not sufficiently marked. The "Delibes" ballet was well enough played. It is pretty, but rather of the nature of casino or park band music and there is, perhaps, too much of it. The "Tristan" was quite good, only the horn seemed nervous and anxious to hurry through his solo. He missed the far away plaintive pathos of those exquisite trilling phrases. The "España" is a most interesting piece of polyphony. One would almost call it a series of layers, one theme superimposed on another, the instruments answering and over-riding each other in a quaint and rather effective fashion. It was perhaps the best item as far as concerned its execution. All its changes and episodes were clearly marked and properly emphasized. For next Sunday we can only count definitely on three items, Saint-Saëns septet, Haydn's "Surprise" and the "Walküre-Ritt." The two other items, "Sylvia" and the "Tobiaszowsky March" figured in this last, and the previous concert. We may hope for the much-delayed "Forest Murmurs" as one supplementary item.

NOISY CAIRO.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "EGYPTIAN GAZETTE."

Sir,—The casual visitor to Cairo cannot fail to be struck by the fact that for its size it is the noisiest town in existence. Coachmen crack their whips in the ears of the passer-by. Street vendors yell their wares with a persistence which is truly surprising, carts, of a design which would disgrace the days of Noah, rattle along with their loads of stone or building material, and to add to the pandemonium of former days, there is now the horn echoing perpetually in almost every street of Cairo.

For a motor car they are supposed to be indispensable, and they are certainly to be preferred to the whistle of one enterprising motorist, who rushes his car through the streets with his whistle in full blast, regardless as to whether there is traffic in the way or not. But the use of these horrible inventions in place of the old bicycle bell is a practice which should be stamped out by law. Not only are they nerve shattering, they are a cause of absolute danger to the pedestrian, who looks wildly round in a search for a motor car, which is not there, with his imminent risk of being run over by the bicycle which he has not noticed. A man, to use the title for courtesy, was observed this morning riding his machine behind another cyclist. The street was empty, save for these two and yet the hindmost kept his horn busy with its discordant notes, until the foremost rider reduced his pace to a minimum in order to let the other pass him. But it was all of no avail. The owner of the horn was evidently out to enjoy himself and he preserved his position until the other stopping he was forced to pass and continued his way, still at his infernal work until he was lost sight of. I am not a vindictive man but I must confess that it would give me unbounded pleasure to hear that this gentleman had met with a serious accident, or had been compelled to keep on blowing his horn through the night, in order that he might realise what the sound of it was really like. Can the Authorities do nothing in this matter, for Cairo is rapidly becoming almost unlivable by reason of its street noises. Yours etc., THE LISTENER.

"THINGS THAT NO EUROPEAN FELLOW CAN UNDERSTAND."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "EGYPTIAN GAZETTE."

Sir,—A few years ago a correspondent called the attention of your readers to a few of the anomalies of modern Egyptian civilisation as practised at Alexandria; of such were the use of the feet in carpentry; the stabling of horses with their heads outwards; and, last but not least, the adoption by the Tramway Company of the red flag as a token of safety, and of the green one as a danger signal; whilst it was the practice of the watchman to endeavour to remove obstacles from the line of rails by charging them at full speed, with a grand display of fireworks, to the terror of lady passengers. Of all these peculiarities and many others, he said, there was but one all sufficient explanation given to the enquirer; "Cosa vuole signore, noi siamo in Egitto!"

Another anomaly in a city where the struggle of the classes for wealth and of the masses for existence becomes keener every hour, is the apparent indifference of all to the time of day except that indicated by the bang of the midday gun. It is but a few years since the first timekeeper in Egypt available to the public was placed at the Bourse end of the Alexandrian square. But the utility of this innovation has not, yet, been sufficiently recognized to encourage either our local benefactors or the "Patres Conscripti" to extend it to other parts of the city.

More recently, the convenience of a reliable striking clock, visible to shipping at the quays, and to arriving passengers, to whom the chances of catching a train to the capital are sure to be a matter of primary interest, was, at once, recognized by the able and energetic Director General of Customs on taking office. He, doubtless, at the same time had in view the necessity for instilling punctuality into the minds of his subordinates, as well as those of persons having business appointments with himself. The value of the Custom House clock has been fully appreciated by merchants and travellers, if not, perhaps, by all those for whose profit it was intended: but clock towers are, nevertheless, conspicuous by their absence from our city.

What a contrast to the peaceful towns and villages of the Austrian Tyrol, where autumn and winter, in the beautiful cities of Innsbruck and Salzburg, are passed as tranquilly as the flow of the picturesque rivers through their midst. And yet, at every turn, the traveller's gaze is met by a lofty quadrangular tower, having on each face an ornamental clock of such dimensions that those who run may read, and be reminded of the fitting moments to be turned to account for the benefit of their fellow toilers in this breathing world; while bells and chimes, at frequent intervals, suggest repentance to the sinner, ere it be too late, and the daily worship due to his Creator. Here, in busy Constantinople, there seems to be no desire on the part of the residents for such infallible reminders of their duty towards God and their neighbour, and of a future existence in a better world. Their detractors go so far as to say that, during six days out of the seven, every moment is devoted with fervour and ardour to adoption of the "Dio del del mondo Signor," whatever creed they may profess on the seventh when compounding for the idolatry of the past week. Happily, if this be true of some, the bright exceptions are far too numerous and conspicuous for the above to be accepted as having any but a very restricted application to our generally pious fellow citizens.

Another anomaly is the liberality towards the public of an impecunious Municipality in a gratuitous display of its art treasures. What a revenue might be obtained from a periodical exhibition, at P.T. 5 per head, of the items of those splendid collections of pictures by local masters, now constantly on view "gratis" in the galleries of the Rue Rosette and Chérif Basa, to say nothing of the gems so lavishly displayed, at intervals, along the road to Ramleh. The poor exhibitors, however, doubtless, have to pay, in these hard times, for the privilege of delighting the eyes and elevating the minds of those capable of appreciating the pitch of excellence in artistic skill to which our Alexandrian Raphaels and Rubens have attained in the days of Egyptian progress.

It seems strange, too, that the Corporation, reputedly desirous of adding to its pecuniary resources, does not take a leaf out of the pages of the "Thunders" with its encyclopaedias, dictionaries, atlases, and book club, and add to its picture galleries some réclame illustrations of its unearthed archaeological lions.

Views of the contents of Dr. Breccia's Museum, of the Serapeum and Pompey's Pillar galleries, and of the wonderful electric lighted Egypto-Roman tomb should lead to a considerable increase in the number of visitors. The senators, too, might show their wisdom (while we wait for some means of carriage circulation by the New Quay to the Palace of Ras el Tin, and the long promised Corniche road to Ramleh) by placing a Municipal version, in poster type, of a popular ditty (parodied by Mr. Jarley, of fertile imagination and waxwork fame) in the hands of every tourist visiting our shores as follows.

If I know'd an arabic what would it go With trippers to see my Shogile show, D'ye think I'd loathe him? Oh! no, no!
Then drive to Johnny's!

The above are only a few of the things at Alexandria that no fellow as stupid as I am can understand; but none at present from Yours, DUNDREARY.

Alexandria, 4th January.

ZIZINIA THEATRE.

"MADAME BUTTERFLY."

Although only produced four years ago at the "Scala," and strange as it now appears, but coldly received throughout, and applauded by a small minority, "Madame Butterfly" has at last become a universal favorite.

Puccini has of course made many changes in certain passages and eliminated, entirely, portions of the original composition, but even these alterations did not prevent failure of the opera for some two years.

The adverse criticism of the original composition was entirely due to the composer's doubtful prudence in introducing practically identical passages and effects as in "Bohème" and "Manon." Even now one hears an occasional bar or two of one or other of these. It is, however, as it stands, without doubt a very meritorious work and the many delightful melodies and harmonies with which it abounds successfully tided it over its original misfortune.

The dramatic portion of the opera is centred entirely on Madame Butterfly herself (Gio-Cio-San). Butterfly is simplicity itself, an embodiment of affection and devotion; the passion is her state of being, out of it she has no existence; and, alas, poor little Butterfly she becomes the confiding toy of a thoughtless youth, eventually ending her life in an agony of jealousy and despair.

In the title rôle last evening Signorina Salomea Cruseniski gave a well-nigh perfect interpretation of the character and kept her audience in entire sympathy. Both from a musical and dramatic point of view her performance was highly artistic. This was fortunate, for on Butterfly rests the success or failure of the opera. We compliment Signorina Cruseniski on our being able to say that there was certainly no sign of failure last evening. Signorina Margherita Julia also deserves much praise for her excellent work in the character of the servant Suzuki.

Signor Italo Cristalli created a good impression as Pinkerton, his numbers being, effectively sung. Sharpless, the American Consul, was well supported by Signor Nuccio Rapisardi. There is, however, very little opportunity for the male characters in the opera. The chorus was a trifle ragged in the first act, but an excellent rendering was given of the hidden scenes, which forms the rather pathetic ending of the second act, and was very deservedly encored. The staging of the opera left nothing to be desired and the orchestra, under the baton of Signor Zucconi, was, as usual, excellent.

Dans le courant du mois de Janvier de chaque année, tout possesseur d'automobiles et véhicules prévus par l'arrêté du 21 Oct. 1905, doit faire personnellement la déclaration des animaux et véhicules qu'il possède, sous peine d'une double imposition à titre d'amende.

Cette déclaration devra être faite de la manière suivante: Elle portera sur tous les animaux et véhicules que le possesseur possède pour la première fois;

Il n'y aura pas lieu de renouveler la déclaration si aucun changement n'est survenu.

Pour les animaux et véhicules reçus dans le courant de l'année, le possesseur en devra également, sous la même peine, faire la déclaration dans les dix jours de la réception.

A partir du premier février de chaque année aura lieu un recensement en vue de vérifier l'exactitude des déclarations des contribuables, sans préjudice du droit de la Municipalité de réitérer ses vérifications à toute époque de l'année.
